

APPROACHES TO TEACHING THE WORKS OF JOHN DRYDEN

Editors: Jayne Lewis and Lisa Zunshine

Modern Language Association, forthcoming

Table of Contents

Poems

1. Anna Battigelli (SUNY Plattsburgh), "Teaching Religio Laici, Religious Polemic, and Problems of Authority in Restoration London"
2. Cedric D. Reverand II (University of Wyoming), "Dryden the Elegist ('To the Memory of Mr. Oldham,' 'To the Pious Memory of . . . Anne Killigrew')"
3. John Richetti (University of Pennsylvania), "Reading Dryden's Verse: Generic Play and Transformation in the Oldham and Killigrew Elegies"
4. Christopher Dyer Johnson (Francis Marion University), "A King and No King: How to Use Dryden's Engagement of the Reader in Absalom and Achitophel"
5. Deborah Kennedy (St. Mary's College), "Dryden's Sweet Saint: The Killigrew Ode in the Survey Course"
6. Margaret Doody (Notre Dame), "The Dramatic John Dryden in the Poetry"

Drama

1. Robert Markley (University of Illinois), "Tragedy, Performance, and History Teaching Dryden in an Age of Cynical Reason"
2. Will Pritchard (Lewis and Clark), "Marriage à la Mode in a Course on Restoration Comedy"
3. Elliott Visconsi (Yale University), "Teaching Dryden's Rhymed Heroic Plays: The Indian Emperour and Tyrannick Love"
4. Blair Hoxby (Stanford University), "Teaching Dryden's Tragic Dramaturgy and the Case of All for Love"
5. Tom Bonnell and Katie Sullivan (Saint Mary's College), "A Potion for Secret Love"
6. Amanda Eubanks Winkler (Syracuse University) and Kathryn Lowerre (Michigan State University), "'Hither This Way': King Arthur in a Survey Course"
7. J. Caitlin Finlayson (University of Michigan, Dearborn), "'Originally Shakespear's': Adaptation, Critique and All for Love"
8. Elizabeth H. Bobo (University of Louisiana at Lafayette) "The State of Innocence and Paradise Lost: The Politics of Adaptation"

Prose and Translation

1. Jennifer Brady (Rhodes College), "Dryden and Rochester: Tracing Literary Rivalry in Dryden's Prefatory Texts"
2. Gail Shivel (University of Miami), "The Past Confronts its Past: Johnson, Eliot, and Of Dramatic Poesy in the Undergraduate Survey"

3. Aaron Santesso (Georgia Institute of Technology): “Forgetfulness and Authorial Presence in Dryden’s Discourse concerning the Original and Progress of Satire”
4. Adam Potkay (College of William and Mary), “Teaching Dryden’s Latin translations: Lucretius, Virgil, and the Honeybee”
5. Philip Smallwood (Birmingham City University), “Questioning Nature: Dryden’s Fables, Ancient and Modern”

Classroom Contexts

1. Ann Huse (John Jay College), “Restoring Dryden to the Core Curriculum”
2. Mark K. Fulk (Buffalo State University), “‘Art She Had None: Concepts of Nature, Women and the Soul in the 17th-Century Survey”
3. Kristin Wilcox (University of Illinois), “Absalom and Achitophel in an 18th-Century Survey Course”
4. Scott MacKenzie (University of British Columbia), “Forward from MacFlecknoe: British Literature, 1660-the Present”
5. Dianne Dugaw (University of Oregon), “Multimedia Dryden in the Smart Classroom”