

The Word & the World: Lessons from South Asia and Beyond

Cellphones and Globalization

Tuesday, Nov. 15
@ 1 - 2 p.m.

WT Young Auditorium

Andy Kavoori's talk, titled "The Word and the World: Lessons from South Asia and Beyond," will focus on a theorization of contemporary media practices around the interrelated network of what he calls the "logics of globalization".

These include capitalism, nationalism, modernity and post-colonialism. He will seek to demonstrate the complexity of these logics in the working of media in South Asia and beyond.

About the Speaker:
Andy Kavoori

Anandam (Andy) Kavoori is an entertainment and media studies professor and serves as the coordinator of the Environmental Communication Initiative at University of Georgia's Henry W. Grady College of Journalism and Mass Communication.

With a doctorate and two master's degrees, he has written many works that highlight his interests in digital storytelling, international media, and environmental communication.

This event is part of International Education Week
Full list of events available at www.uky.edu/international

 International Center